

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1834.

A Political Farce is now going on in this city which amuses those it does not disgust. GEORGE POINDEXTER is the principal actor. The Swigs called him out several times on the night of the election and he attempted to make speeches to them, but was not so successful as David Crockett in addressing the same audience, and the whole affair ended in a most miserable abortion. On Monday evening he visited the Tremont Theatre—the box door was opened and closed several times before he entered; the ladies upon the front seat were desired by the Constable of the theatre to give up their places to accommodate the honorable gentleman, as he and his party declined going into the box if that seat was to be occupied by any persons save themselves. This, after some delay, was done—a change of positions took place by those in the box, and Mr P. entered just as the audience were giving a round of applause to Mr Wallack, which the modest gentleman appropriated to himself, and commenced smoothing down his hair and bowing his head; whereupon the people in the house perceiving his awkward mistake, helped him out of it by bestowing a portion of their attention upon him and clapping their hands a few times, after which his honor became seated. At the close of the entertainment he rose and bent his graceful figure several times to the pit, and one or two cried out "three cheers for POINDEXTER," but it did not take very well, and the Swig Senator departed in peace. We hope, as a stranger, that he will receive the hospitality of the city, but, as a politician, it is indelicate and improper for him while here to endeavor to excite one portion of our population against the other. We have scarcely a heart to complain of him, however, for the poor man has more on his hands than he can well attend to already. He is involved in a paper war with Mr John F. H. Claiborne, of Natchez—who was once his warm friend, and voted for him twice as the Senator of the United States. In consequence of a resolution which was passed by a meeting of the citizens of Adams County, Mr Poindexter addressed a letter to the Natchez Courier, in which he pronounced "the statements contained in the resolution, so far as relates" to himself, "to be utterly false and unfounded in every particular, word, line, and sentence; known to be false, in many respects, by John F. H. Claiborne and Anthony Campbell, by whom, it seems, they were concocted." Mr Claiborne replies in a letter to the "Editor of the American Standard," on the 9th of October; in the course of which he says: "After the language in which he has allowed himself to indulge, I violate none of the courtesies of life in saying, that I entertain for him, with a pride as lofty as his own, the most supreme contempt; that I know him to be a false traitor to his private and political pledges, and that I will prove him such by various letters and communications addressed to me, while he was a candidate for the Senate, and I, a member of the Legislature. Humble as I am, a planter, holding no office, the honorable George Poindexter, President of the Senate of the United States, shall not find me the passive victim of his malice."

The Mississippi says, that Col. Campbell will also "reply to the Senator. He has known him long and well, and has it in his power to brand him," &c.

The Wool Growers vs the Panic Makers.—The panic makers, consisting of the Bank men and tariffites, and the subsidized presses, among others of the community on whom they "preyed," "plundered" the wool growers, by misrepresenting the value of wool and the state of trade.

The wool growers of Hampshire County have recently held a meeting, and framed an association to protect themselves against the like depredations in future, at which meeting they passed the following resolutions, a pretty severe rebuke upon the character for veracity of the panic makers:

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the Press, the great channel of political and business intelligence, is, when made the medium of truth and correct moral sentiment, a great and invaluable blessing to the community, and, as such, is well entitled to the approbation and generous patronage of the people.

Resolved, That, when under the management of interested and designing men, it is prostituted to the base purpose of AIDING the SPECULATOR and MONOPOLIST by MISREPRESENTATIONS, AND THEREBY ROBBING THE UNWARY FARMER OF A PORTION OF HIS HARD EARNED PRODUCTS, IT JUSTLY DESERVES THE MOST UNQUALIFIED REPROBATION OF THE PUBLIC, AND THE INDIGNANT FROWN OF EVERY HONEST MAN.

Resolved, That, as the community HAVE, THE PAST SEASON, SUFFERED SEVERELY BY SUCH MISREPRESENTATIONS, it becomes highly expedient to guard against these impositions for the future, by forming an Association of WOOL-GROWERS, and a Committee of Correspondence, that we may thereby obtain early and correct information of the state of the market, and thus secure to ourselves a fair and equitable price for this commodity.

Resolved, That those editors of newspapers, who, by their timely cautions, have, in some measure, guarded the Wool-growers from such impositions, are justly entitled to our hearty thanks.

Resolved, That while we feel for ourselves, we also respect the interest of the manufacturer, and would not think of combining to the injury of that respectable part of the community.

Mr Mitchell, the Post Master at Portland, is to be removed, and we are heartily glad of it, for he is one of those conceited, weak men, who have not feeling and mind enough to be constant friends, while their vanity makes them the tools of those who are willing and able to tickle it. We have always disliked him ever since the first hour we put eyes upon him, and we are rejoiced that he is to leave the public employment, and return to his China cup and saucer business.

General Todd is a free, gentlemanly, honest hearted man, and as true a democrat as ever walked the earth; his appointment will be gratifying to all but mischief-making politicians.

The Transcript says, that an individual named Guier, or Grier, a foreigner, has been arrested in Philadelphia, on suspicion of being the person who assassinated Perry, on the evening of the election in Locust Ward. He had a partial examination before the Mayor, and was committed for further hearing. The presumptive evidence against him is very strong.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Humburg.—The New York Evening Star, some days since, contained the following paragraph:—

"The Experiment.—Yesterday, fifty thousand dollars, in American half dollars, sold at one per cent. premium! This is the result of the Jackson gold concern. Silver, the real circulating medium, will be exported from this country, leaving a trifle in gold, and the rest in paper."

This is the way in which the Bank papers, as directed from head quarters, attempt to impose upon the "intelligent, well educated, American-born citizens," who consent to train and do duty under the Whig flag. And it must be confessed, they too often succeed, to the disgrace of those young traders and others, who pretend to so much intelligence, but who never think or understand for themselves, but always as they are directed from high authority. A premium of one per cent. on silver has not the least connexion with the "Jackson gold concern." Dollars and half dollars have been above par, from half to three, four, and five per cent., time and again, before the "Jackson gold concern" was thought of. American half dollars often command a premium, to ship to China, India, or elsewhere beyond the Cape. When exchange on London is high, and silver bullion brings a good price in England, it then becomes better to make remittance in silver than in exchange.

All foreign silver, whether coined or uncoined, is mere bullion in England, and the price is constantly fluctuating. It is simple merchandise, and when it is shipped from this country, the calculation of profit is made on the same principle, as when cotton or any other article is exported. There was never, perhaps, so much silver in the country as there is at this time, and there was never less danger of its becoming scarce. The people, therefore, need not regard the croakings of the Whig panic makers. The U. S. Bank alone has now between fourteen and fifteen millions of silver in its vaults, to say nothing of all the State Banks throughout the country. Of what consequence, therefore, is the shipment of fifty thousand dollars, a mere trifle, to India? It is probably an adventure to Calcutta, or it may be a remittance of funds by the missionary societies. Molehills are magnified to mountains by Whig spectacles.

If the rate of British exchange should become so high as to produce a re-exportation of silver, the fault will be—not with the "Jackson gold concern," which can have no connexion with it—but with the U. S. Bank, the operations and manœuvres of which may, by and by, possibly have this effect. In the height of the late distress, and partly to increase it, as well as to make a great speculation, the Bank refused to buy exchange from the cotton planters and shippers. Such was the panic and the inability among the merchants, brokers, and importing houses, that none would buy for their future occasions. The planters and shippers, were, however, compelled to sell, and thus exchange was reduced below par. At this critical movement, the Bank privately purchased all it could, and became, in fact, the monopolizer of nearly all the exchange in the market. It had lately between four and five millions of dollars in exchange on London, which it holds at a high rate. If this rate be placed so high by the Bank, that it will be more advantageous to export silver than to buy this exchange, then, indeed, large quantities of silver may be sent out of the country, but not otherwise. The bank, this winter, will consult its own interest and the interest of the bank party, in resolving whether to create another panic and distress, or not. I am inclined to think, that either it cannot, or it will not dare to do it.

There is another point of view, in which this exchange speculation may be considered. The bank party and the tariff party are sworn allies. If they succeed, the rich manufacturers will vote for the renewal of the bank charter, and the rich stockholders of the bank will vote for the restoration and increase of the high duties. They, therefore, on all occasions, play into each other's hands. It was known that the importers of English goods would not, under the existing panic, dare to order goods, or to take advantage of the low price of exchange to obtain goods cheap, which would have injured the manufacturers. Exchange was therefore allowed to fall to its lowest rate, before the bank monopolized it. So soon as the panic was well over, and, in consequence of the revival of business, the importers began to think of ordering goods and purchasing exchange, the rate was immediately enhanced by the Bank. The importer is now compelled to pay six or eight per cent. premium. This enhances the actual cost of his goods in the same ratio. The price and profits, at which they are sold here, must be increased in the same proportion. The operation is precisely like an additional duty of 8 or 10 per cent. in favor of the American manufacturer. It not only increases the price of the English goods to the American consumer, but has the same effect also upon American goods. Thus, the farmer and mechanic, in consequence of the bank monopoly of exchange, pay 8 or 10 per cent. more than they otherwise would, for what they wear, which goes into the pockets of the manufacturers and bank stockholders. That on English manufactures is paid, in the shape of premiums on exchange, to the U. S. Bank, and that on American fabrics is paid, by the advance of price and profits, to our own rich manufacturers.

The editor of the Brooklyn, N. Y. Advertiser has sent us, wrapped up in his paper, a female whig, whose ebony visage and natural curls could not be increased by lamp-black or hot iron. He undertakes to palm her off as the Mysterious Lady, but it is no go—he intended that she should arrive here a few days sooner than she did and vote with her colored friends in favor of the Whig ticket; but fortunately for us she was too late, and election had past before she reached Boston to join in the support given by de fuss colored circle to de Whigs.

"All the (Swigs) learning."—The Selectmen of Fitchburg, in making out the warrant for the late town meeting in that place, omitted to mention that a member of Congress was to be chosen from that district, and consequently no poll was held for that officer. One of the Selectmen has been several times elected to the Legislature by the swigs of that town; of whom, we presume, he is a choice specimen.

On our First Page will be found an account of a visit to the Chinese Lady.

TRIAL OF THE SPANISH PIRATES.

Benjamin Lorkum—I was with the Mexican when the robbery was committed. [The witness looks towards the prisoner Ruiz, the Carpenter of the pirates, and says—"I saw that man in the boat with the first party that came on board." [The witness was one of the boat's crew, that went in pursuance of the pirate's summons, alongside of their schooner.] When they ascended the Mexican, I was left in the boat, and when I was bailing her out, I heard a noise on board, and thinking that the pirates were murdering the crew, I left the boat, and crept into the forechambers, and crawled out of the way. [Witness puts his hand on Ruiz' shoulder, and continues—"I first recognized Ruiz among the prisoners at Salem—I don't recollect that I told any one at that time, that I recognized him—I can't swear that Ruiz is the man, but I think he is the man."]

John Battis—18 years old—was one of the Mexican crew—I see two men here who were among the pirates—I witness goes up to the prisoners, and puts his hand on Ruiz and Boyga—Ruiz, with great indignation and energetic gesture, says—"You say you saw me? You lie." The witness first recognized these two men on board of the British man-of-war brig Savage, in Salem harbor. They were on board the Mexican 3 or 4 hours—I saw these two men every time I went on deck—I have no doubt that Ruiz is one of them—I can swear, too, that Boyga is one—when they first came on board I was not much alarmed—began to be alarmed when they showed their knives, and began to abuse us—their knives about a foot long, and both edges sharp.

Thomas Fuller—I was one of the Mexican crew—there is one man here that I think I know to be one of the pirates that boarded us. [Witness goes up to point out and identify Ruiz, and strikes him a violent blow on the shoulder, and then retreated from him as swiftly as if he had touched an unclean thing, or touched off a keg of gunpowder. This vulgar, and, indeed, cowardly action, was resented by all the prisoners, who nearly all rose up, and expressed themselves with the most indignant gesticulation. When Ruiz was requested by the interpreter to be seated and still, he rose and repeated a pantomime of the blow he had received, and striking his breast with his right hand, exclaimed, in Spanish—"It ought not to be suffered in any tribunal, for any one to strike such a blow—it is unnatural," (i. e. cruel.) [The whole court was thrown into temporary confusion, by this unceremonious recognition.] The witness continued, "I am not certain that he is one, but I think he is—one thing I saw him do, was to beat the steward, with a baton, below deck in the fore-cabin."

This witness, when asked if he struck the prisoner so hard out of any particular enmity to him, replied, that he had no more hostility to him than the rest, and the whole affair was dismissed by Mr Danlap humorously remarking, that "if he had struck lighter he would have testified harder."

Benjamin Daniells—was one of Mexican crew—puts his hand on Ruiz's shoulder, and says that he was one of the pirate crew. [The witness touches the prisoner lightly, and receives a smile from him for his courtesy, which was quite agreeable after the preceding ruse de bear he had been subjected to.] I am certain, confident, that he is one of the men—he was driving us round with the rest of the five that first came on board. [In reply to Mr Child, "I am aware that his life depends on my testimony."—Judge Story: "that was not a proper question: the witness is not to be presumed to know what may depend on his evidence." Mr C. then endeavored to get at an answer, by a more indirect and circumlocutory interrogatory, but Judge Story ruled it out peremptorily.]

Thomas Charles Henry Ridgely, colored man—I had a good chance to see them as they came on board—I was standing on some spars, and laying my body on top of the cabin—[witness goes up and identifies Boyga and Antonio Ferrer, the colored boy—Ferrer was on board of the schooner, at the time—he was seated on the foretop gallant yard—the schooner was close enough to us for me to see the scars on his face—[Ferrer here rose, and said, with a sneering smile, and a very graceful waive of the hand—"You must have very fine eyes."]

John Lewis—colored—I was steward of the Mexican—[puts his hand on Ruiz and says, "he beat me down in the half-deck, with an oak baton, because I would not tell him where the money was—he broke the baton into three pieces with striking me."]

Mr Child to Lewis—You and the witness have been kept together. What have you been talking about?

Lewis—We have been talking about nothing.

Evidence of Joseph Perez, one of the Pirate crew, taken by the government, for a U. S. witness.

Mr Danlap requested Mr Badlam, the interpreter, to say to Perez—"You are now put to the bar as a witness; and if you tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, you will not be prosecuted."

Judge Story instructed Mr Badlam to repeat Mr Danlap's proposition to Perez, by one sentence at a time, and to add—"If you do not tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, you will be liable to be prosecuted as much as any other of the pirates"—and to add the distinct question to him—"Are you willing to testify upon these conditions?"

This question being answered in the affirmative, a Bible, certified by the Bishop to be such, was produced, and with his left hand on the New Testament portion of the Scriptures, and the right one raised, he was sworn according to the most solemn form known.

Judge Story then asked, through the interpreter—"Do you believe God will punish you, if you testify falsely?"

Perez answered affirmatively, and the examination proceeded; he testified as follows, with the exception of such omissions, as are not deemed essential:—

Joseph Perez. I was born in the island of Marguerita, in Colombia; am about 22 years old. I was taken to Havana in a vessel, a prisoner, and stayed there four months. Afterwards, about two years and four months ago, I joined the Pinda at Havana; Pedro Gilbert, now present, was her commander; Bernardo de Soto, present, was her mate; Francisco Ruiz, present, was her carpenter; all of the prisoners were of the crew, but all the crew are not here. When we sailed from Havana, there were 30 in all, including the officers. When we sailed from the mouth of the harbor, in passing Moro Castle we were hailed—"where bound?" We answered, to St. Thomas and Principi, on coast of Africa, and our Captain's name given "Pedro Gilbert." We sailed at 8 in the morning, somewhere about the 20th or 26th of August. We first spoke a corvette, on the 20th of September, at 4 in the morning; I first saw the American brig, heading south; the Captain was asleep; it was the 2d mate's watch; the captain got up and ordered the schooner to be put about; we tacked ship and stood for the brig. When it began to be more light, the brig altered her course to west, with all sails set; our schooner then set all her sails. I was stationed in the foretop; at half past 6 I sung out, "A sail!" it was to windward of the American brig; I should call it a schooner brig. About 8, the Mexican altered her course and sailed south; the Pinda loosened her sails and stood for the brig; a sailor on board went forward to the bows and fired a musket; the Mexican hoisted an American flag; the Pinda hoisted a Colombian flag. A sailor, who spoke English, hailed the brig, "Where do you come from?" "From Boston," was the answer.

A boat from the brig, with four men and an officer, rowed to our schooner—came on the larboard side.

[Mr Childs here objected to Mr Badlam, as an interpreter, because he asked the witness whether the boat came to the stern or bow.

Story, J.—Mr Badlam's question was perfectly right, as the answer of the witness did not meet the question, as larboard or starboard is not a particular designation of any part of the vessel.

Mr Child—I wish to have it noted here, that I distinctly object to proceeding any further in this trial with this interpreter. A man cannot be a safe interpreter, when he is obliged to turn at every third word, to two gentlemen at his side for the meaning.

The two gentlemen referred to, at the request of Mr Child, had been permitted by the Court to set by the sworn interpreter, to aid him, as he declared at the outset, that he was not familiar with Spanish nautical terms. The Court overruled the objection to the interpreter, and the witness proceeded.

The 3d mate, boatswain, carpenter and one sailor got into the brig's boat, and went to the brig—that is, four men of the Spanish schooner embarked in the boat for the American brig. There the carpenter sits [here arose a brief, but most ferocious gabbling between the witness and Ruiz, who appeared ready to fly at each other's throats]—the 3d mate ran away from Nazareth—the boatswain died at Fernando Po, a prisoner—Delgado was the name of the sailor, and he died in Boston Jail. The people of the brig went below in the fore-cabin—the 3d mate took the speaking trumpet and sung out to the captain of our schooner: "There is on board what you wish; what you are looking for; she carries $20,000, as put down in the papers of the vessel; the money is in 10 boxes, containing $2000 each." The boatswain held up a handful of dollars and showed them to the captain, and afterwards threw them into the sea. The captain sung out, "Very well, very well; let her be well scorched, and let it all come on board."

[At this stage of the examination, Mr Child reiterated his objections to the interpreter, and Messrs. Shelton and Payton were sworn as assistant interpreters.]

The $20,000 were brought on board; it was money; I saw it with my own eyes from the top; the schooner's launch towed the American boat to the schooner: I looked so intently at what was going on in the brig, that the captain scolded me, and sent another man up to look out; four men then went on board the brig; they were Garcia, Montenegro, Castillo, and Ruiz [all in court]. I was in the tops; told the captain there was a sail in sight; "Where away?" said he, "Astern of the American brig." "How close?" "So high, I can see her 3 masts." At this time, one of my comrades in the American brig was standing guard over the fore-cabin, with a handspike; the captain sung out to take them [brig's crew] out of the fore-cabin, and shut them up in the cabin; the 3d mate, with a sword, and a sailor, with a knife, then chased them all from the fore-cabin to the cabin; the people were shut below with a padlock. After they were all shut below, saw smoke; they all then started for the schooner, bringing a keg of butter and one of lard; when about half way to the schooner, 3d mate and boatswain got out of the American boat, and knocked her bottom out with something heavy; when our launch was hoisted, we turned a gun towards the brig, and made a round turn across her bows.

The Pinda first made Cape Monte, on the Coast of Africa—then Port Bazaar, staid there some days, took in water, &c.—one morning saw a frigate running down with all sails set—our Captain then ordered all the knives to be taken away from the crew—the frigate saw us, and sailed on the other tack—our Captain ordered us to weigh anchor, and with a light wind and ours we got out from Grand Bazaar—went to Cape Lopez—thence to the river Nazareth, in November, and left me ashore there to look after the slaves—the schooner sailed to the Isle of Principi, in January. When they came back from Principi, they came running away, and they ran the schooner ashore, on the beach of Cape Lopez—the Captain came ashore at Nazareth—I was his servant, and while setting the table I heard him tell the boatswain that he had to fly from Principi because the news of the American brig robbery had reached there—he had bought $250 dollars' worth of provision, which he was obliged to leave—the schooner remained at Nazareth about 4 months—when the English hove in sight with their boats, the carpenter went into the cabin, took up the after scuttle, and put a brimstone match to a bag or keg of powder—the rest of the crew had all gone ashore—the carpenter then left in a canoe. Before he left he took the papers of the schooner, and brought them with him. The Captain and men all went to the negro barracks, and remained there till the English vessel went to sea.

The English brig took the schooner off to sea, but both came back again, and came to an anchor; the English commander came on shore, and demanded the captain, mate, and carpenter; captain hid himself in a negro hut; the commander demanded them of the black king; he refused to deliver them up; the captain of the brig began to fire on the town, from the pivot gun of the schooner Pinda, a 12 or 16 pounder, till she caught fire during the bombardment. After the English went away, the money was hid in a barrel, on the beach, on the right side of the river; the captain that day gave orders to move back into the woods as the English boats were coming down upon us; we took the money to Cape Lopez, and buried it there; I went after it there again, by the captain's orders, with Boyga, Castillo, Ruiz, and Velasquez; while Castillo and I were digging up the money, the others began to count it; I said there were too many muskets here to throw away time in counting the money; one of them replied, that it was the captain's orders to count it, and leave five thousand dollars there for him. After his $5,000 were left, there were about $6,000, which we took to the negro barracks. We divided this money between us. * * * We were sitting in a dark room; the carpenter and captain up stairs talking; the carpenter came down, and said, "The captain is going to divide the money, and if all did not go and get their share, there would be the devil to pay." They all then went and got their share.

I delivered myself up at Fernando Po—myself, Castillo, Montenegro and Garcia, and Delgado, went there together in a boat—was taken in an English transport to Ascension, Sierra Leon, back again to Fernando Po, then to Principi, back to Ascension, where I found the rest of the prisoners, in custody. We five were taken to Plymouth, in England, in the merchant schooner Hope, and then put on board a 74—while on board of the 74, the other prisoners were also brought in by the British man-of-war brig Curlew, and put on board of the 74 with us, and we were all brought to this country in the 10 gun brig Savage.

The Court adjourned without commencing upon the cross-examination of this witness.

Miss Phillips.—We alluded yesterday to this lady's personation of Belvidera, but the manner in which she performed the mad scene deserves a more particular notice—this scene, an English writer observes, "is always a most severe test, as the mockery of madness, when indifferently done, is either very disgusting or very ludicrous;" but Miss Phillips, in it, was thrillingly perfect—her looks, attitudes, voice, and rapid gestures, all pictured the heart broken maniac with startling accuracy, and won for her the universal admiration of the audience. Her countenance, generally, appears to lack flexibility, and her enunciation is somewhat indistinct, at times—but the beauty and grace of her figure, and the fine expression of her face, are a rich recompense for the trifling faults we have been so ungallant as to mention. She certainly is a lady of rare and great histrionic talents, and one whom we have not seen equalled in her profession for many years.

As Mrs Haller, last night, which by the way is the most mawkish and sickening character in the drama, and which every body abuses, and yet go to see it again and again, she played as well as the part is capable of being performed, and made the kerchiefs perform their usual offices on such occasions.

They did the thing elegantly for KNOWLES, at Philadelphia, in the public dinner they gave him, and no man on earth is more entitled to respect than he—his heart is all meridian, and his spirit worthy of the heart it rests in. JAMES SHERIDAN KNOWLES is as charming a Poet, as honorable a Man, and as pure a Patriot, as ever lived. Heaven grant that his virtues may meet their merited reward, wherever he may be.

Gambati and Ravaglia will be here in a day or two, when the musical portion of our community will have a rich treat—they probably will give several concerts—it is some time since we have had a good one, and we think they will be liberally encouraged.

A new Post Office has been established at Medway, West Parish, Massachusetts, called the West Medway Post Office, and Olney Tristall, Esq. appointed Post Master.

New York Election.—The Journal of Commerce furnishes returns from 53 out of 55 counties, which give Marcy 13,669 majority. It is ascertained that 31 Jackson men, and nine Bank men are elected to Congress.

The Election.—Returns from 169 towns give—

The trial of Abner Kneeland is postponed to Monday next.

Execution.—On Friday last, Nelson, a slave, the property of Mr Richard Chilton, of this county, was executed, pursuant to his sentence, for the murder of Mr Edward Jones of this place, in September last. Comparatively very few persons attended—nearly a moiety of whom were of his own color, of both sexes—a few white women also were present. Nelson met death with composure, but displayed nothing like hardihood. He prayed several minutes, in an audible voice, and afterwards sung a hymn, apparently an extemporaneous effusion. Some portions of his prayer were fine specimens of natural eloquence. We recollect only one of the expressions with which we were struck at the moment—one in which he compared the trembling of his heart to the quivering of the leaves in the fall of the year. The simile was pertinent and high by poetical.

Steam Boat Accident and Loss of Lives.—The Mobile Advertiser of the 27th ult. says, "A report reached the mail boat Watchman, just as she left the rail road at New Orleans, on Saturday evening last, that the steam boat Missouri Belle and the Yellow Stone, came in collision on the Mississippi, just above that city, and that the formerly instantly sunk with every soul on board. It is said there were twenty-three passengers on board, all of whom it is feared have perished. No other particulars have been received, and we still hope the destruction of human life is not so great as at present seems probable."

Rail Road Accident.—Mr Ephraim Colby, in attempting to jump from a car yesterday, got entangled in the rope and fell across the rail. The car passed over his thighs near the hips, and crushed them so that he died in a few minutes.—Lowell Jour.

David Springstein, of Newtown, L. I. reported to have died from having indulged too freely in his favorite dish of black snakes, is still alive, although suffering from a surfeit of his pleasing and palatable food.

Loan.—A loan of $120,000 for one of our banks, says the Mobile Mercantile Advertiser, has been obtained at six per cent, through the agency of H. Hitchcock, Esq., from the house of J. D. Beers & Co. of New York.

Three candidates have started up for Congress in Col. Crockett's district.

Similes.—"I hope I don't intrude," as the knife said to the oyster. "Come in," as the spider said to the fly. "Come on," as the man said to his boot. "You make me blush," as the lobster cried out in the boiler.

CARSTAIRS

SYSTEM OF WRITING,

TAUGHT

BY B. F. FOSTER,

Author of "Prize Essay on the best method of Teaching Writing," "Practical Penmanship," &c.

The System of Carstairs, as simplified and taught by Mr. FOSTER, differs essentially from all others extant. The process of instruction is novel, ingenious and effective, converting, in an incredibly short period, the most confirmed and ignorant scholar, into a style of writing at once bold, free and elegant.

Who wish to correct a bad hand-writing can receive lessons either at the establishment, 116, Washington Street, or at their own residences.

HOURS OF INSTRUCTION from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.
EVENING CLASSES, for gentlemen, from 7 to 9 P. M.
LADIES' CLASSES, at the rooms, from 12 to 1 P. M.
